Defending Professional Liability Claims in Bankruptcy Court

By: David C. Anderson and Featuring Joe Kingma
Strangers in a strange land. That's how many defense lawyers and claims examiners feel when defending an insured lawyer in bankruptcy court after the client has filed for bankruptcy. Bankruptcy trustees, creditors' committees and liquidating trusts make very dangerous plaintiffs. And many defense lawyers feel like they have been dragged into bankruptcy court "separated from their wallets without any concern for proximate cause or liability issues."
